Understanding Proprietary Software Piracy Policy

The software may not be used for anything that would represent or is associated with an Intellectual Property violation, including, but not limited to, engaging in any activity that infringes or misappropriates the intellectual property rights of others, including copyrights, trademarks, service marks, trade secrets, software piracy, and patents held by individuals, corporations, or other entities.

In respect of commercial software, an end user license agreement is included to protect the software program from copyright infringement. Damages often include paying the price of the illegally-downloaded licenses, and may also lead to serious personal sanctions, such as imprisonment, fines, and even deportation for a company's top officials.

Software is developed by publishers/owners, including us and many small businesses relying upon steady sales not only to survive but also to improve our products and invest for the future. The creative teams who develop software including programmers, writers, graphic artists and others, also deserve fair compensation for their efforts.

Software is protected under the federal copyright law which states that, "Users may not make a copy of a piece of software for any other reason than as an archival back-up without permission of the copyright holder." The unauthorized reproduction of a computer program is considered theft.

Proprietary is are some software the source code of which can only be modified by the individual or organization who created it. We as the owner or publisher of the software holds intellectual property rights of the source code exclusively. This type of software called as "proprietary software" because only the original owner(s) of the software are legally allowed to inspect and modify the source code.

In simple terms, proprietary software is software that is solely owned by the individual or the organization that developed it including us. Proprietary software, as the name suggests, are exclusive property of their creators or publishers and anyone outside the community are not allowed to use, modify (include rebrand or redesign), copy or distribute modified versions of the software.

The owner of is the exclusive copyright holder of the software and only owner has the rights to modify or add features to the program's source code. We are the sole owner of the program who can sell it under some concrete conditions which should be followed by the users in order to avoid any legal disputes. We also not provide any white label version and not giving any source code to users. We just provide end-user software and not allow to modify it.

Detecting software piracy is no longer reserved for sophisticated intelligence agencies and cyber police and can easily be traceable. Once we known people sell software illegally, we as copyright holders can take swift legal action against infringing companies. This includes filing a complaint with the police and the local courts. Employers should be aware that deleting illegal software can also be tracked, and is often seen by the courts as the company acknowledging its own wrong-doing and possibly tampering with evidence.

Software piracy is a serious crime and can result in severe legal penalties for both individuals and businesses. For people or businesses caught selling illegal software, the legal penalties are much worse. Fines can go as high as $250,000. The accused may also face up to five years in prison with a permanent felony on their record.

Thank you.

JOMBIZ Network,
